For the 18% of Americans that know how to drive a manual, many will recall the painstaking learning experience in an old, mundane vehicle. Slingshot wants to provide a new perspective on how much fun mastering the art of slipping gear to gear can be, in full control of the vehicle, by offering lessons in a Slingshot.

“Driving a manual transmission and feeling the gears shift is simply the most fun way to drive,” said Chris Sergeant, Vice President of Slingshot. “However, the population of proficient stick shift drivers is dwindling, and we want to provide the exhilaration of the gear shift to a whole new group of drivers. We want to reintroduce the lost art of driving a stick in the most fun environment possible, in the most fun vehicle on the road.”

Consumers can go online at www.slingshot.polaris.com/en-us/dealer-locator/ to find their local participating Slingshot dealer and begin the journey to learning the most fun way to drive a vehicle.

The Summer of Fun sweepstakes, running throughout summer and until September 22, gives consumers unique and fun ways to enter. Entrants can enter by swinging by their local dealer and taking a Slingshot test drive, by renting a Slingshot, or by sharing their experience in a Slingshot on social media. All stick shift lessons are considered a “test drive,” so all consumers who learn to drive a manual will be entered for the chance to win.

Entrants can also experience all the fun Slingshot has to offer by renting one through a Polaris Adventures Outfitter, which are located around the country. As an added bonus, Slingshot owners who showcase their Summer of Fun by posting videos and photos to Instagram, Facebook or Twitter and include the hashtag #SlingshotSummerFun will be entered for a chance to win.

With four distinct models, ranging from $20,999 to $30,999, the 2019 Slingshot lineup takes style, technology, and comfort to a whole new level. Each Slingshot packs a GM Ecotec 2.4L DOHC four-cylinder engine and delivers 173 horsepower by way of a five-speed manual transmission.
